Sowing Grass Seed.

To prepare for sowing grasses we must have deep plowing, thorough harrowing, and fineing the soil so that a good surface bed is made for sowing the seed. For pasture, mixed grasses are the best, in this respect as some said, is at its best while others have decreased. This is much better than sowing single grasses, unless we except Bermuda and blue grass, as these contain the necessary nutriment without adding others, being as near perfect as can well be. For a mixture I would recommend orchard grass, meadow fescue, blue grass, red top, and alfalfa and clover, forty to fifty pounds of this mixture being abundant, for one acre. Pasturing of meadows is injurious; a good aftermath should be left for protection through the winter and spring. Many persons will ask what is the best hay grass for the South. After an experience of twelve years in growing it, and marketing the hay, I unhesitatingly recommend the Johnson grass (sorghum halapense) as unequalled. My experience accords with that of A. B. Moore of Georgia, who for forty years tried all kinds, and finally settled upon this as the best, which he raised alone for many years. But some farmers will hold up their hands in holy horror, when I mention it, for have they not been taught to fight Johnson grass all their lives, and considered it the greatest pest of the country in the way of grasses. Yes, I reply, you have, but that did not make it so. Your good common sense should have led you years ago to make a friend of what you conceived to be an enemy; had you gone to raising this grass for use on your farm you might perhaps have been a rich man before to-day. This prejudice is fast dying out, because Johnson grass has made its way against all opposition until now, it has no superior in the land as a drought-proof crop and as a hay grass. Last year, in Texas, while everything was all dried up, the Johnson grass kept on growing, and was the salvation of many a farmer by hay made from it.

High Manuring.

The venerable Peter Henderson thinks manuring cannot be overdone, and says: It is a great blunder to attempt to grow vegetable crops without the use of manures of the various kinds. I never yet saw soils of any kind that had borne a crop of vegetables that would produce as good a crop the next season without the use of manure no matter how rich the soil may be thought to be. An illustration of this came under my observation last season. One of my neighbors, a market gardener of twenty years' experience, and whose grounds have been a perfect model of productiveness, had it in prospect to run a sixty foot street through his grounds. Thinking his land sufficiently rich to carry through a crop of cabbages without manure, he thought it useless to waste money by using guano on that portion on which the street was to be, but on each side he sowed guano at the rate of 12,000 pounds to the acre, and planted the whole with early cabbages. The effect was the most marked I ever saw. That portion on which the guano had been used sold off readily at $12 per hundred or about $1,400 per acre, both price and crop being more than the average; but the portion on which the guano had been withheld hardly averaged $2 per hundred. The street occupied fully an acre of ground, so that my friend actually lost over $1,050 in crop by withholding $60 for manure. Another neighbor, with a lease only one year to run, also unwisely concluded it would be foolish to waste manure on his last crop, and so planted and sowed all without. The result was, as his experience should have taught him, a crop of inferior quality in every article grown and loss on his eight acres of probably $2,000 for that season.—National Stockman.

Rotation of Crops.

Perhaps this subject engrosses the mind of the farmer as much as any other connected with his business. Many articles have been written on the subject, published in the agricultural journals, and discussed by the readers, and yet, to-day, many farmers are undecided as to what is the most successful course for them to pursue. In selecting a course for myself I bore in mind the fact that manure was of the most importance on the corn and root crops, from the fact that the roots of corn go deeper than those of other crops in my rotation. I therefore start out with corn the first year with all the manure, spread from the wagon, (not dumped in piles to leach out for a month or more, then scattered) before plowing. Then after corn has been gathered I plow in the fall if weather will permit, and sow in the spring to oats. After this crop is off, I seed to wheat and clover. After allowing it to remain in clover two years I put it in wheat a second time, allowing all the fall crop of clover to remain and be turned in, and after wheat this time, I return to corn as in the start.

By this system, as the manure is turned under for corn, its roots generally find a portion, and when the piece is plowed for oats the rest of the manure comes to the surface to benefit the oats. After the wheat, which follows oats, the clover sowed with or upon it is out the following spring and fall, and the second fall I plow the second crop of clover to get as large as can be turned under for the next crop of wheat. Some years it may be best to allow the seed to be taken from the clover, with success depending on suitable weather for threshing; but upon the whole, in a series of years, I believe the additional quantity of wheat resulting from the green crop plowed under will overbalance the clover seed crop. The potatoes being planted the same year with the corn, and at the ends of the corn rows, get the full benefit of the manure plowed under. By making four or five hills of potatoes at the ends of corn rows it is better to turn the team upon in cultivating.

The Hen Manure.

By all means save the hen manure. If there is not cultivated ground or a grass plant on your own place where it can be used, it is always in demand by those who do need it as a fertilizer, while saving it either increases the bounty being kept on and in good order for the fowls, free from filth and injurious odors. Unless the manure is comparatively dry and well mixed with some disintegrating material, like sand or gravel or loam, we would not advice putting it in barrels at once, but rather spread it over some floor, in the grass or hay, where it can dry well, when it should be well broken up (sieved through a coarse sieve, if you have time) and put in barrels or boxes and stored away. In this shape not only can a better price be obtained for it if sold, but it is much more readily applied to crops. For corn, in the hill, mix about an equal quantity of dry earth with it and drop a handful in each hill; or, better still, just before the corn comes up (say a couple of days after planting) drop a handful on the top of each hill, as there is less danger of burning out the corn. For peas, beans, onions and root crops it is most excellent, the best results being obtained by sowing it along and between the rows. Those who sow it with, or on under the seed often endanger the vitality of the seed or of the young and tender shoots, so that sowing it along and between the rows say twice each season and just before a shower—is much preferable.—Poultry Monthly.

Linsed and Cotton Seed Meal.

Cotton seed meal, when used in moderation, is a very useful food for dairy cows. It is the reverse of laxative, and tends rather to constiveness. This, however, gives it an especial value when cows are upon grass, or when it is mixed with bran. When it was first introduced in the Northern States as a food for cows, twelve years or more ago, it was sold at eight dollars per ton, but the demand has become widely popular, and has advanced in value fifty per cent. Still for the nutriment contained in it, it is yet cheap, being valued for its nutritive elements at forty-six dollars per ton, as compared with the best clover hay at twenty dollars per ton. It is very rich in nitrogenous substances, and is consequently an unsafe food for cows, if fed to excess. The cotton plant possesses some very powerful medicinal qualities. The root produces abortion, and the seed certainly has some of the same active effect. The meal has a decided inflammatory effect upon the milk glands, and, therefore, is to be used only in very moderate quantities. We have fed it to cows from four pounds daily down to one pound, and while feeding two pounds daily, with twice as much bran and corn meal, the butter produced of a cow experimented upon ran up to two pounds daily. When four pounds daily was fed, with the same quantity of corn meal and bran, the yield of butter was only 1.83 pounds per day for a few days, when an attack of garget was brought on, and for fourteen days afterward the yield was less than a pound. As this result happened frequently with other cows in the dairy, and hired men could scarcely be restrained from using so much of it, and a fine litter of Berkshire pigs were sacrificed to this temptation to feed the meal to excess, its use was discarded. With one pound only, used with twice the quantity of corn meal and bran for a single ration, cotton seed meal may be used safely; but as any excess over that is apt to be injurious, it is advisable to mix the feed in bulk so that the ration cannot be succeeded by any accident. This meal gives a high color, solidity, a fine waxy texture and a rich nutty flavor to the butter.—American Agriculturist.

Most men of experience and observation are careful to buy small trees in preference to large ones. The first cost is less, the freight is less, they have more roots in proportion to size than large ones, suffer less by transplanting and shipping and grow more rapidly. Buy small trees, generally those not more than two years from the bud, and healthy one-year olds are best of all.

"It Saved My Life" Is a common expression, often heard from those who have realized, by personal use, the curative powers of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. "I cannot say enough in praise of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, being as I do that, but for its use, I should long since have died from lung troubles."—E. Dragoon, Palestine, Texas.

About six months ago I had a severe Cough, and my lungs were brought on to a dangerous condition, and I was unable to sleep or rest. I had used various cough balms and expectorants, without obtaining relief. A friend advised me to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. I did so, and am happy to say that it cured me. I had used it for a few days, and I was satisfied, saved my life.—Mrs. E. C. Allen, Second St., Lowell, Mass.

I have used Ayer's Cherry Pectoral for over a year, and sincerely believe I should not be here, had I not used it. It has cured me of a dangerous affection of the lungs, and I had almost despaired of recovery. Finding a remedy.—D. A. McMillen, Windsor, Province of Ontario.

Two years ago I took a very severe Cold which settled on my lungs. I consulted physicians, and took the remedies they prescribed, but failed to obtain relief. I then used Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. Two bottles of this medicine completely restored my health.—Lizzie M. Allen, West Lancaster, Ohio.

PURE, HARD AND BRILLIANT Brazilian Axis Cut Pebbles. For sale by Hales & Boyne, Charlotte.

They are a natural stone, almost as hard as diamond, take a high polish, will not scratch, nor will moisture collect on them in warm weather. They confer a brilliancy and a distinctness of vision, with an amount of ease and comfort not hitherto enjoyed by spectacle wearers. They neutralize and prevent the irritating rays of light from entering the eye. They improve, strengthen and preserve the sight, thereby resting the optic nerves and in many cases preventing headache. On account of the purity of the material of which they are made, they cause no dizziness or wavering of sight. Every pair warranted. The common, inferior Spectacles, which are sold and bought, regardless of their quality or accuracy, are made from inferior material or imperfect Lenses discarded from better grades; they stimulate heat, irritate and inflame the eye, they retract the rays of light unequally and fail to correct all optical defects. We wish to impress upon the public the importance of wearing good eyes, and never neglect to wear glasses when the first symptoms of failing sight appear. Every genuine pair is stamped with Trade-Mark B.P. The Pebbles are set in Gold, Silver, Celluloid, Steel, Nickel, and Rubber Frames. For sale by HALE & BOYNE, Jewellers and Opticians, Charlotte, N. C. March 25, 1887.

Scrofula Is one of the most fatal scourges which afflict mankind. It is often inherited, but may be the result of the reaction of vaccination, mercurial poisoning, uncleanliness, and various other causes. Chronic Sores, Ulcers, Abscesses, Cancerous Humors, and in some cases, Emaciation, and Consumption, result from a scrofulous condition of the blood. This disease can be cured by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

I inherited a scrofulous condition of the blood, which caused a derangement of my whole system. After taking less than four bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla I am Entirely Cured and, for the past year, have not found it necessary to use any medicine whatever. I am in better health and stronger than ever before.—O. A. Willard, 215 Tremont st., Boston, Mass.

I was troubled with Scrofulous Sores for five years; but, after using a few bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, the sores healed, and I have now good health.—Elizabeth Warnock, 94 Appleton street, Lowell
